

Sho Shimada, MD, PhD is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Infectious Diseases at Nagasaki University Hospital, Japan, and is a board-certified infectious disease specialist. His research focuses on the clinical aspects and epidemiology of severe fever with thrombocytopenia syndrome (SFTS), conducted in close collaboration with epidemiology and virology research teams. His research background includes bacterial genomics and clinical infectious disease research.